

While each student will be working directly with their individual Thesis or Dissertation Directors (noted on most Forms as Graduate Research Directors - GRDs), each of the graduate programs at the College has its own Program Graduate Director (PGD), who is responsible for the collective graduate research in their own programs. Thus, each program has only one Program Graduate Director (PGD), as opposed to many individual Thesis/Dissertation Directors, who are responsible for directing an individual student's Master's Thesis or Dissertation. Here is the current list of those Program Graduate Directors (PGDs) who are responsible for policies and procedures:

Chiropractic:	Dr. Jeffrey Ware
